Troy

About 3,260 years ago, Troy and Sparta began to fight with each other after the Trojan prince asked Queen of Sparta to leave her husband and sail back to Troy with him. The angry King of Sparta found this out and set off with 1,000 ships holding 50,000 people of Sparta to Troy. The war went on for years, but Troy still stayed safe.

One day, a few soldiers of Sparta brought a big wooden horse with most soldiers sailing away and with only some staying near Troy. They climbed inside the horse. One soldier, Sinon, pretended to be angry with his country people, saying that they left him alone. He told the Trojans that this horse was safe and would bring good luck to Trojans. They were happy and dragged the horse full of foods into Troy. That night, when the Trojans were sleeping, Sinon let the soldiers of Sparta out from the horse, opened the gate, and they took over the city.

So, now when people use computers, they say it's a Trojan horse. That means it will hurt your computer. And your computer doesn't work.
